

Sara Lubitz, MD

Sara Lubitz, MD is an Associate Professor at Rutgers Robert Wood Johnson Medical School where she serves as Program Director for the Endocrinology Diabetes and Metabolism Fellowship. She earned her medical degree from Rutgers New Jersey Medical School (formerly UMDNJ) and completed Internal Medicine residency, chief residency, and Endocrinology fellowship at New York University. Areas of clinical interest include pituitary, thyroid and adrenal disease. She serves as Medical Director of the Pituitary Center at Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital and runs clinical trials in Acromegaly, Cushing's disease and hypoparathyroidism. Dr. Lubitz is a member of the AACE fellows education subcommittee and the APDEM finance supporting endocrine fellows-in-training as future clinicians and colleagues. She is recognized clinically on a national level by Best Doctors® in America and locally by NJ Top Docs and Jersey Choice Top Doctors.